

This is a black and white aerial photograph of a residential neighborhood. A prominent, dark, irregularly shaped area, likely a large field or undeveloped land, occupies the central portion of the image. This central area is surrounded by a dense arrangement of houses and streets. The houses appear as small, light-colored rectangular shapes with dark roofs. A network of streets is visible, including a major road that runs horizontally across the middle of the image, just above the central dark area. In the bottom right corner, there is a distinct, light-colored, triangular-shaped building or structure. The overall image has a grainy, high-contrast quality typical of older aerial photography.

A black and white photograph of a multi-story building. The building has a light-colored facade and a dark balcony with a metal railing. A large, dark tree is in the foreground on the right side. A person is visible on the balcony. The image is oriented horizontally on the page.

This is a detailed black and white map of the San Jacinto area in San Antonio, Texas. The map shows a grid of streets including San Jacinto Blvd, San Antonio Blvd, and San Marcos Blvd. Numerous buildings are depicted with hatched patterns, and several are labeled with names like 'San Jacinto Hotel', 'San Antonio Hotel', and 'San Marcos Hotel'. A compass rose is located in the bottom right corner, and a scale bar is in the bottom left corner.
